for skipping sharply in March amid a flight to safety as Covid-19 spread across the world. The US dollar has declined, by around 10 per cent, to a four-year low against a basket of major currencies represented in the so-called basket of 10, which was the worst month for the greenback since April 2020. Some observers believe the dollar’s weakness will have a long way to go, which would have major implications for the global economy, as well as various investors.

Although the behaviour of currency markets offers obvious explanations, there are several plausible causes behind the dollar’s weakening over the past five years. The US dollar weakness bears looking at.

Implicit bias and the cultivation of racial harmony

Tackling implicit bias starts from a young age. The review of Character and Citizenship Education should draw on research to see how to improve education against bias.

Adrian Kwek

For The Straits Times

July 21 is Racial Harmony Day, a day set aside by the Ministry of Education in 1997 to remind students of the 1960s race riots in Singapore and the importance of racial harmony for our society. The setting aside of this day is one of many government and civic measures that have been put in place to promote racial harmony. They appear to have worked. The number of riot-related studies conducted in the past year, which showed that Singaporeans now have better attitudes towards races other than their own, is a testament to the Ministry of Education's efforts.

INTERGROUP CONFLICTS

Intergroup psychologists focus on the conflict between two groups, whether they are known to be competitors or not. They say that one of the most difficult factors in intergroup psychology is overcoming stereotypes, or how people form beliefs about others based on limited information. This leads to a lack of understanding and, ultimately, prejudice.

FEELINGS OF SECURITY

On the other hand, psychologists say that people often experience feelings of security or how people feel when they know they are part of a group or when they feel that their interests are being protected. This feeling of security is often a result of intergroup psychology, or how people feel when they know that their interests are being protected.

INCLUSIVE COMMUNITY IDENTITY

The new identity is the one that is not only shared by the group itself, but also by the individuals in the group. The group is defined by the people who share a common heritage, language, or culture. This identity is often a result of the intergroup psychology, or how people feel when they know that their interests are being protected.

IMPLICIT RACIAL BIAS

Implicit racial bias is a topic that has been in the spotlight recently. It is a form of prejudice that is not easily recognized, and it can have a significant impact on how people interact with one another. The study of implicit racial bias is often a result of the intergroup psychology, or how people feel when they know that their interests are being protected.

CONCLUSION

The Straits Times says US dollar weakness bears watching. Several emerging economies’ currencies have rising against the dollar over the last month. These economies might also benefit from a rise in commodity prices, which is typically associated with a weaker dollar.

But none of this is around. The unpredictable course of the US dollar and the ongoing geopolitical tensions could cause additional forces of fear and panic, triggering, yet again, a flight to the safety of the US dollar. The dollar’s position as the top reserve currency is also far from secure, though. So the dollar’s decline is by no means a temporary phenomenon. But if trajectory hearts watching the winds about.
