(PART-TIME PROGRAMME)

Programme Overview

The curriculum of this programme focuses on two major fields in the study of the Malay language: namely its linguistics and literature within the context of the Malays and their society. Students can expect to develop knowledge in key areas in linguistics such as grammar, phonetics, semantics and discourse analysis. The linguistics component will explore key areas in the study of the Malay language, with a focus on the application of systemic analysis of linguistic data and application of theoretical linguistic concepts in explaining the Malay language. The literature thrust of the programme will provide students with an overview of literature in Malay as well as train them to appreciate the importance of literature in language teaching.

You may pursue Malay Language and Literature as a single subject or in combination with a minor.

Please refer to the SUSS website for details of the minor courses.

Objectives

This programme is principally aimed at producing competent graduates in the field of Malay language studies and literature with a strong capacity to apply their knowledge in the work place. The objectives of the programme are:

1. To equip Malay language and literature students with a set of core knowledge, skills, and competencies required to work in language-related industry, particularly education, editing, translating and allied services such as government ministries, corporate consultancy firms and human resource departments.
2. To enable students to apply linguistic knowledge in the workplace in the areas of language teaching, editing, translating or interpreting.
3. To deepen students' knowledge of modern Malay literature and how it can be used to enhance the teaching of Malay.
4. To enable students to see the triadic relationship between Malay society, values and philosophy in the development of the Malay language and its literature. It is within this arena that the students will be able to see the relationship between knowledge in linguistics and models of analysis being reflected in everyday language use.

5. To enable students to gain knowledge and understanding of Malay language and literature and the ability to express this understanding lucidly to any audience, and to bring to bear this understanding in either teaching or applied language work within the Malay community or the diverse population and communities in Singapore.

Unique Features of the Programme

You decide how fast you want to complete your degree.

Students may take courses at their convenience when they are offered. We understand that the pace of completion of the degree is very much dependent on the ability of the students to manage career and family commitments and doing well in their studies. On average, most students take 4 years to complete a basic degree, but would have up to 8 years to do so if they wish.

There is sufficient face-to-face interaction with lecturers and tutors. Each course consists of six lecture-seminars conducted over a six-week period. Courses conducted by invited foreign faculty will be conducted over a week of intensive lessons in the evenings or over weekends. All courses have comprehensive e-learning support.

The 18 hours of teaching time (6 weeks x 3 hours) for a 5-credit unit (cu) course will cover the essential components of a specific subject or topic in Malay language and literature. The diverse range of subjects undertaken will enhance your chances of applying your knowledge of Malay language and literature in your work.

Excellent performance is affirmed in the BA Malay Language and Literature (BAML) programme as we have 6 merit awards awarded annually to top students in the Programme.

Whom is this for?

If you have a passion to know more about the Malay language, linguistics and literature and you feel that it will not only enrich your life but also your career prospects, then this programme is indeed suitable for you. The knowledge of the linguistics of Malay can be applied in teaching, translation, editing and negotiation skills and other transferable language skills in the workplace like discourse patterns in conflict resolution. Knowledge of literature will provide students with an overview of literature in Malay and a comprehensive understanding of Malay culture, thoughts and values. It will also imbue students on the importance of literature in language teaching.

Programme Structure

This programme provides a broad base of knowledge of Malay language and literature with a solid foundation in applied linguistics.

The first cluster of courses on Malay Linguistics and Applied Linguistics fulfils a key content area which is crucial for a graduate of a Malay language programme.

The second cluster of courses on Malay Literature and Society allows students to have a strong grounding in literature and how traditional and modern literature have shaped Malay society, thought and philosophy.

Message from the Dean

The BA Malay Language and Literature (BAML) programme at the Singapore University of Social Sciences (SUSS) is designed to meaningfully enrich the lives and careers of adult learners through an effective understanding of Malay linguistics, literature and society. Students do not just learn the Malay language and its literature. They will enjoy putting this knowledge to good use by teaching others or through creative use of language by producing translations and interpretations. This programme will bring the best academics in the field of Malay studies in the region to our shores and allow students to achieve their potential through a flexible study path.

Quote from President (2008) of Singapore Malay Teachers Union, Dr Bibi Jan bte Md Ayyub:

"The Singapore Malay Teachers Union welcomes this programme and we see this as an alternative platform for Malay language teachers to enhance their professional qualifications and career development. This programme will benefit the teachers who have to teach during the day and attend classes in the evening. With the endorsement and recognition from the Ministry of Education, our teachers will be employed after graduation. This is really something positive and we are moving in the right direction of building the capacity of our teachers."
